WOMEN'S WOES.

Hard for any woman to do housework— to attend to daily duties with a constantly aching back. Every woman should learn the cause of backache and the cure.

Doan's Kidney Pills

relieve a bad back and cure it—cure every kidney and bladder disorder, from backache to diabetes.

Mrs. C. P. Goodnow, living at 143 Washington street, New Britain, Conn., says: "I gave a testimonial in December, 1898, to the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills; and in the statement said that I had been bothered with my back and kidneys for over thirteen years, not constantly, but when I caught cold it generally settled in my back, making it lame and sore. Often the pain through the small of my back was so severe as to make me cry out. I read about Doan's Kidney Pills, and procured some from E. W. Thompson & Co.'s drug store, on Main street. They helped my back immediately, and in a short time relieved me of the trouble. I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills at intervals during the last five years, when I felt an attack of backache coming on, and they always brought instant relief. I am never without them in the house."

An Animal Story For Little Folks
The Swimming School

The bullfrog sat upon a rock
And croaked aloud, croaked he:
"I'm tired of banking work; I'm tired.
More useful I will be.

"I'll stop this croaking all day long,
With greenbacks all around."
And then he left the bank and walked Until a duck he found.

"I, too, am sick of croaking round,"
Said Doctor Duck, with vim.
"Let's start a swimming school and teach
The birds to float and swim."

Said Mr. Frog: "I'll teach the birds
To dive and swim, no doubt,
And you can float and swim as well.
'Twill be the best thing out."

They built a bath house large and bright
Down by a running stream
And hung up placards all around
To advertise the scheme.

The sparrow, crow and robin came,
With oriole and jay,
And all were entered on the books
For lessons every day.

SOLIDIFIED ALCOHOL.

NEWARK INVENTOR DISCOVERS A PROCESS TO TRANSFORM THE LIQUID.

An inventor in Newark has succeeded in finding a compound which will hold alcohol in suspension in a solid form, and he declares that his discovery is both new and useful. Whether it be true that no one else has ever before succeeded in getting alcohol in a solid form, it is certain that no one has put it into the market in that shape. There is no doubt as to the usefulness and advantage of such a compound. The inventor contemplates its use solely as a fuel. Whether it could be used for other purposes does not appear, but there seem to be other possibilities for it.

After the inventor had exhibited a sample of the solidified alcohol to a San reporter and explained its uses, he offered to prove the character of the compound in a practical way by making some of it for the reporter. If the reporter would go to his workshop in Newark and take with him his own supply of alcohol. The only stipulation made was that the alcohol should be at least 95 per cent in strength, as the presence of water would prevent the success of the process. The reporter accepted the proposition and went to Newark, taking with him a half pint whiskey flask filled with 95 per cent wood alcohol.

The inventor measured out the alcohol and then for every two ounces of it added to it a slice of a waxy compound, shaped like a piece of pie, and cut from a box the size and shape of a stove blacking box. Each slice of this compound was about an inch wide at the circumference of the box, half an inch thick and 1 1/2 inches long. What this was composed of is the inventor's secret. It felt waxy, and was bright and porous, and from its smell had evidently been prepared with wood alcohol.

The alcohol and this compound were heated together in a water bath until the alcohol boiled, and at that temperature the compound in it melted and mixed, with it, forming a clear liquid except for a pink coloring which was an arbitrary addition to the waxy compound. The mixture was now set to cool, and in a short time it became a stiff paste.

It is in this form that the inventor purposes to put it on the market. Although it smells strongly of the alcohol, the mixture seems to be stable, and samples which were put up in two ounce tin boxes three months ago have lost little by evaporation. If a lighted match is touched to the alcohol paste it melts on the surface and takes fire, burning freely with the characteristic blue alcohol flame, only with a tinge of yellow added at the outer part. Burning freely in the box and giving a flame big enough to heat a chafing dish, a two ounce box of paste kept lighted for about two hours, where the same alcohol in a liquid form would have burned in ten minutes.

Many uses for the new paste will occur to the reader. Alcohol is one of the most desirable of fuels for many purposes, and in a form where it can be transported without danger of its leaking or spilling would have an added value for hunting and canoeing trips and for exploring expeditions. Instead of a can of the fluid, my lady can have boxes of the paste to light under her chafing dish or to heat a curling iron, and a man can use it to heat shaving water or to make a toddy. If the mixture be heated to a melting point and then kept in agitation while it cools, it does not harden, but by hand mixing compound separates and is held in suspension. In this state the liquid alcohol might be recovered, and this suggests other uses for the compound.—New York Sun.

A WARM BED.

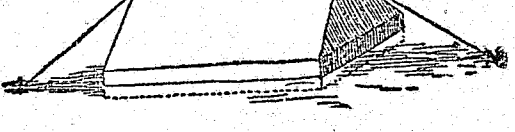

An Arrangement For Storing Sweet Potatoes and Early Vegetables.

For years we have made the good old fashioned deep bed covered with boards and glass. This method proved expensive and laborious. Casting about for a better way, we met an extensive sweet potato raiser of the Ohio river section. From him we learned the following method, which we now use exclusively and with perfect success, says an Ohio Farmer correspondent:

For ordinary family use the bed should be made about 10 by 15 feet. A pit this size and about six inches deep is dug. Any rough boards may be used for frame, which is made about 18 inches high and of course the same size as pit. This is built inside of the pit and when completed extends one foot above the original surface of the ground. It is best to raise the north side of the bed about four inches higher than the south side so as to get best ter effects from the sunshine. The frame completed, then bank up on the outside to within one inch of the top, using the dirt that was thrown out of the pit. The bed is now ready for the manure, which should be of the kind ordinarily used for this purpose. Fill in about 12 inches deep, trampling well. Then cover the manure with about five inches of rich dirt.

The bed is complete. Now the covers. Two gables are made, the only timbers required being four good stiff pieces about 2 by 7 and seven or eight feet long. These gable ends are erected over at each end of the bed and at an angle of about 30 degrees. Next a strong wire is stretched from one gable to the other at the top for a ridgepole. This wire extends on over each gable and down to the ground at each end of the bed, where it is securely staked. If put on properly, this wire makes the bed very solid.

The bed is now ready for the canvas, which consists of extra heavy unbleached muslin made just the right size to extend from one side of the bed over the ridge pole to the other side. This canvas is tacked to the frame at each side and to the rafters at each end. Gables are covered with the same material. This muslin cover turns the rain, keeps out the cold and is almost as warm as glass. It is comparatively cheap, and when the bed needs attention it need not be loosened except at one corner.

This bed we have found very satisfactory, and if made the size recommended it will produce besides the sweet potato, tomato, cabbage and pepper plants, enough radishes, lettuce and beets for early family use.

MAKING CIDER.

The Best Varieties of Apples—Clean Mills and Utensils.

The present season, with its promising apple crop, will undoubtedly see a great deal of cider and vinegar made, says New England Homestead. The prevailing idea that cider can be made from any kind of apples may result in a great deal of poor cider and consequently poor vinegar. Especially is this true in sections where premature dropping is more common than usual. An attempt will undoubtedly be made to utilize this partially matured fruit by making it into cider. This may be the best means of disposing of it, but good cider cannot be expected from such fruit. It will be thin and watery, and vinegar made from it will contain a small percentage of acetic acid. As most states require 4 to 4 1/2 per cent of acetic acid, vinegar made from poor cider must be tested before being sold.

As the amount of acetic acid in vinegar will depend primarily on the percentage of sugar which the cider contains, it can easily be seen that to have the best cider and cider vinegar, well developed apples, containing enough sugar to make at least 6 per cent alcohol, must be used. They should not be of the very sour variety nor of the very sweet. Russets, Smith's cider, Snow and those of that class are the best. However, by judiciously mixing sweet and sour, a high class product results.

Another element of success is a clean cider mill. Of course, up to date cider makers have improved machinery and keep their buildings and presses perfectly clean, but in many of the apple growing sections there are small mills and presses. These are seldom in the best condition. All apple pomace should be removed as quickly as possible and not allowed to decay near the mill. The crushing rollers and the presses should be cleaned frequently and fumigated, if possible, by the use of burning sulphur. If the pomace cannot be utilized for stock feed, it should be hauled away and spread upon the land as fertilizer where it will be of the most benefit. All tanks, and utensils used about the mill, where fumigation is impossible, should be scrubbed with lye from wood ashes or a strong solution of crude potash.

If the utensils are so old that taint or small cannot be removed by this process, it pays to abandon them and get new ones. Where satisfactory conditions concerning surroundings cannot be obtained, it is best to haul the apples to the cider mill, have them worked up at once and take the cider home the same day. This prevents the absorption of objectionable odors and reduces to a minimum the evil effects of a poorly kept cider mill.

After the juice has been extracted from the apples the cider should be kept at a temperature of about 65 degrees, if possible, where wanted for use as cider. Even then fermentation will soon begin. After a few days the cider can be racked off into barrels which have been well cleaned. Fermentation, or at least the tendency to turn to vinegar, will be checked.

The Cowpea Moving Northward.

The cowpea is moving northward at a rapid rate. Five years ago it was not known where there was now acres on acres growing. Those who plant it on properly prepared soil, harvest it at the right time and give it the same care that clover should have will be pleased with it provided they plant the variety adapted to their latitude. The tall growing late varieties are all right for the south, but in latitude 38 and northward I am satisfied that the dwarf and earlier varieties, like the black, are most suitable and will give the best satisfaction. Those who grow cowpeas for hay should keep in mind that they are at their best for hay when the first or lower pods are ripening. After these pods are ripe the lower leaves begin to come off, and the stalk becomes hard and tough. Cut as soon as ready and thereafter handle like clover, and the hay will be first class. If one has no barn or shed for storing it, a rainproof covering of some sort should be put on the stack. I have seen farmers try to keep it with such protection, and in every case from one-fourth to three-fourths was spoiled before midwinter, says F. Grundy in Farm and Fireside.

A Peach Catalogue Produced.

E. C. Irish of the botanical garden, St. Louis, asks the co-operation of peach growers in a systematic study for a catalogue with full description of the varieties of peaches grown in America. He suggests that samples of three or four specimens of each variety of ripe fruit, together with a twig and a few leaves and a concise history and description of the tree, be sent to him.

Agricultural Briefs.

A good prospect for apples in New York state, with Baldwin in the lead. Greening, Russet and Spy are other varieties generally grown.

According to an exchange, the peppermint oil crop, which a few years ago was the leading crop of Wayne county and brought more money into the hands of the farmers than did even the apple crop, will become nearly extinct.

Many persons will not realize what the green pea louse has done until they buy canned peas next winter. The price then will startle them, and they may talk powerfully about a trust of some sort. The truth is that this louse ruined the crop in many localities and is likely to do more damage in the future, says Rural New Yorker.

A quite unusual Canadian experiment has for its object the making of rum from the sap of the sugar maple. It is said that a liquor can be distilled from the sap of the maple which will retain all the delicate, sweet flavor which makes pure maple sugar so popular.

The Black Cat.

The famous "Black Cat" cabaret in Paris is in process of being shut up and sold out and its curious decorations scattered to the four winds, upon which the Boston Herald says:

The name Chat Noir was given to the cabaret because this worthy Bohemian, at the end of his resources, caused his favorite black cat to be cooked as a succulent "fricassée" of rabbit with plenty of onions. At the end of the desert, which consisted of a few nuts and a piece of cheese, Rodolphe rose, and, with his abominable bass voice, began to sing a requiem about Bibi, one of the three cats which had been killed to feed himself and his friends! Babette duly followed Bibi, but the last one, called Noireau, the finest tomcat on Montmartre, he did not sacrifice. As the story goes, it was the fat check of an artless Yankee that saved the cat. In gratitude, Salis hired a larger shop and adorned it with the "poster" sketches which made him a success. As every one knows, it became the fashion for other eccentric personages in Paris art life to add their mite to the place's decorations, and on those walls Caran d'Ache, Willette, McNab and many other illustrators have left some valuable autographs. Collectors will be eager to buy chunks of the cabaret, but the best thing would be to keep it whole and transport it to America, where it could be set up as a show.

A Wary Youngster.

Some of the small boys who get into a business life young can be relied upon for good common sense. A man in one of the big shops uptown was much pleased at this attribute in a boy he employed. He was a bright, honest boy, quick and reliable, and when a second boy was needed they sent for Sam. Couldn't he get them a boy? They wanted a boy as good as he was and he must know of one. After some thought he finally agreed to send one and the next day the boy arrived, and Sam was called to identify him.

"Do you know this boy, Sam?" asked the employer.

"Yes," answered Sam. "I know him." "And you know him to be a good honest boy?"

"I have played with him all my life, and I have always thought he was." "But you will vouch for him?" per stated the employer.

"No," answered Sam indignantly. "I won't vouch for any one. I wouldn't vouch for my own brother. How do I know what temptations you are going to put before him?"—New York Times.

Young Plants

Every farmer knows that some plants grow better than others. Soil may be the same and seed may seem the same but some plants are weak and others strong.

And that's the way with children. They are like young plants. Same food, same home, same care but some grow big and strong while others stay small and weak.

Scott's Emulsion offers an easy way out of the difficulty. Child weakness often means starvation, not because of lack of food, but because the food does not feed.

Scott's Emulsion really feeds and gives the child growing strength.

Whatever the cause of weakness and failure to grow—Scott's Emulsion seems to find it and set the matter right.

Hyomei cures catarrh by the simple method of breathing it into the air passages and lungs. It kills the germs of catarrhal poison, heals and soothes the irritated mucous membrane and effectually drives this disease from the system.

If you have any of the following symptoms, catarrhal germs are at work somewhere in the mucous membrane of the throat, bronchial tubes or tissues of the lungs.

offensive breath
dryness of the nose
stopping of the nose at night
pain in back of the head pain in front of the throat tendency to take cold burning pain in the throat hawking to clear the throat stitch in the chest stitch in side loss of flesh
variable appetite
low spirited at times raising of frothy mucus expectorating yellow matter difficulty in breathing frequent sneezing

hushiness of voice discharge from the nose
stopping of the nose at night
acridity of the body acridity of the throat ticking pain in the throat formation of crusts in the nose dryness of the throat loss of strength
spasms of coughing cough short and hacking cough worse nights and mornings loss in vital force
a feeling of tightness across the chest

Hyomei will destroy activity of all catarrhal germs in the respiratory organs and in a few weeks the cure will be complete.

This is a strong statement, but the Noyes Drug Store emphasizes it by agreeing to refund your money if Hyomei does not cure.

Officer Godwin of Brookton Attended and Met Some Distinguished People.

A reunion of the family of Godwins, of which Orrin M. Godwin of Northfield street, Brookton, Mass., is a member, was held in Boston the week of 15th of August with a large representation of the family present. This family has an interesting history in many ways, containing members who have been prominent citizens in civil and municipal affairs and members who have served their country in the time of war.

The commencement of the C. A. R. was one of the reasons that brought the family together and the members took in this affair as a body.

The Godwin family were Rumford, Oxford county, Maine, people and these sons of the Pine Tree State are now scattered over a wide territory. There were eight children, five of whom were boys and three girls. The five sons enlisted in the cause of their country when the Civil War broke out, and one of them a boy of but 10 years was killed on the field of battle. There are four brothers living and three of them were present at the reunion with two sisters. They were Charles O. Godwin of Waterford, George H. Godwin and Orrin M. Godwin of Brookton, Mass., Mrs. Elmira Clary and Mrs. Josephine C. Whitney of Roxbury, Mass. Another brother, Rev. Allen F. Godwin, who is 78 years old, of Indiana, was represented by his son, Rev. Ivan Godwin, and wife of Indiana, the father not being able to attend. The reunion was held with Mrs. Elmira Clary, 46 Circuit street, Roxbury, Mass., and a pleasing program was given and a delightfully informal occasion enjoyed.

This week is being held the Ossipee Valley Union Fair at Cornish, three days. There is a good field of entries in each of the five trotting classes.

Our Friend, the Horse.

And Some Other Matters.

Camp-meeting season seems to cause nearly as much misery for our friend, the horse, as does Fair time and other seasons of horse racing. We see nearly as many over-worked and underfed horses being driven with heads checked up until their necks look like a camel's, which their owner reckons, we presume, gives them "style" and thinks that the restless tossing of head and neck and anguished staring eyes conveys an impression of equine youth and high spirits.

I wonder if there are souls enough "saved" to justify this extra damnation of the brute. A horse that has worked hard six days of the week is justly entitled to rest on the seventh, (see Ten Commandments.) And of all people, prospering Christians ought to obey that law. They read, "the laborer is worthy of his hire," and then begrudge him enough to eat. (Not all of them, thank God! there is yet a little heaven.)

Many a man will steal from his horse, who would be ashamed to from a human being—presumably because the latter could tell, and then like the ostrich with his head in the sand, think that no one knows, while his poor horse's ribs are proclaiming to the world that his owner is a thief. I don't believe there can be found a single pious owner of a horse like the foregoing but with such a condition of isolation and delight of camp-meeting if it is possible.

The camp-meeting people may claim exemption from responsibility in the matter but that won't change the facts of the case. They are responsible for contentmenting cruelly. There is no excuse for allowing any person of that sort on the grounds, for they have no soul, or certainly none worth saving.

If we take the Word for our guide and believe what we read, "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy," we must also naturally infer that the unmerciful are to receive exactly the opposite kind of treatment. And we all ought to be willing instruments in carrying the law into effect here and now, until the unmerciful as a class shall have become extinct.

If people who pretend to right living were not so covetously or selfish about enforcing righteousness in their own ranks, the Pagans would soon join them with few exceptions, and they—the exceptions—could soon be compelled to outward decency.

Thus, for instance, at our next County Fair, all the roads leading thereto for a radius of miles, would not be made a hideous approach to a civilized community by drunken, racing horse jockeys, and some who are not jockeys.

There is enough suffering and abuse for the helpless dumb creatures, crowded into a three-days holiday, the Fair, to give a thoughtful person food for reflection. Whether Man indulges in religion or recreation the result is generally the same to creatures in his charge.

In olden times the creatures were slaughtered before they became burnt offerings for the safety and happiness of their owners. But now the tender mercies of the slaughtering stage of the game is often denied to them as at clam bakes and broiled live lobsters, etc. Oh, we are the people!

He lived only a few minutes.

Sessions was a son of Sumner Sessions and was 43 or 44 years of age. He had several times threatened to make way with himself, and it is understood on at least one occasion had unsuccessfully attempted to do so.

Our quiet little town was unexpectedly thrown into a state of excitement last Saturday morning by the report that Elmer Sessions, a resident of Milton, had shot himself on his streets. It is said to be the old sad story of the throwing aside of the marriage covenant and of one who bore the sacred name of Mother forsaking her little ones and leaving them to the mercy of the world. While love for their little ones would have spurred some fathers on and given them the courage to fight the battle, of caring for their little children alone, the belief of a different make-up could not beat the loneliness and wretchedness that filled his broken home, and who of us are capable of judging him?

Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Sessions were visiting children in Stark, N. H., and were called home by the death of their son Elmer. Also Mr. and Mrs. Elroy Hickey and Mr. and Mrs. John Hickey from Stark came to attend the funeral of their brother, Elmer Sessions.

The funeral was held Sunday at 10:30 at Milton in charge of Underaker Andrews of West Paris.

The Lake Carnival.

The Lake Carnival last Wednesday evening surpassed anything ever before seen here. All the cottages on the lake were brilliantly illuminated. Pine Point cottage displayed the letter E, the initial of its owner, Mrs. Emily Felt. Camp Dewey was distinguished by an immense fire pointed star. A huge bonfire was burning at Peverly and Mann's boat landing. Prof. Wiske's new cottage was displaying a beautiful six pointed star, and Hall's Point adjoining was displaying an immense anchor. Guernsey Island and Camps Cohasset, Echo, Christopher and Buchanan were brilliantly lighted. At eight o'clock the boats formed in line at a given signal and made the circuit of the lake. As they passed the several cottages, they were saluted by a beautiful display of fireworks which was worth coming miles to see.

The display at Hall's Point was magnificent beyond description. The Bryant's Pond Cornet Band, located on Guernsey Island, played almost the entire evening.

I. A. Hall's boat represented a battleship and was awarded the first prize. E. J. Mann drew the second prize. His boat representing the "Frigate," the 3d prize was given to the Ricker boarders. Their boat was brilliantly illuminated with the transparency "Ricker" for a center. The prizes were given by I. A. Hall of Patterson, N. J.

The committee on prizes were Mr. Clark, Mr. Barker and Mrs. Hopper of Bryant's Pond. Great praise is due those having the celebration in charge. Time and space forbids us to mention many other beautiful features, and in fact words can but faintly convey an idea of the whole scene. "Grand" "beautiful," "magnificent" were the adjectives continually heard from the crowds of people thronging the lake shores.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than in any other. It is a disease that is incurable and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and treated it with local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven, however, that it is a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood, and cures all surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists, etc.

Possibly Could Have a Vacation.

We were handed the following with the request to print. Evidently the one who drew up this petition was not in sympathy with the Friday afternoon vacation. How generally this was circulated we can't say. Here is the petition:

We, the undersigned business men, hereby agree to close our stores on and after the first day of August or July, 1905, for the purpose of having a month's vacation. The stores to remain closed until opened by the sheriff, or some of the clerks, who are tired of loafing, when there is nothing to do for.

When the public, of whom we hope to maintain our business standing, want ten pounds of sugar, one half pound of tea, collar or necktie, pound of nails, or any other ordinary every day need, they can send to Beers & Sawbuck, who are doing a land office business way out in the wide and woolly West, catching suckers.

We don't need the trade. We are only in this for fun. And only want you to drop in and tell us what you can buy boy's clothes for, that will not fit, also how much you paid for that range that you could not use. We like to have you keep us posted on the prices of goods at wholesale in Chicago. It keeps our courage up when we try to get 100 per cent. on some item that sells for a cent.

Maine State Fair.

W. R. Lincoln, press agent for the Maine State Fair, which will be held in Lewiston, Sept. 27-28-29-30, was in town Aug. 25 in the interest of the society.

Thursday, Sept. 29, Governor's Day, the great $1,500.00 free-for-all-pole is the star attraction and the best horses in New England are already entered. This alone is worth going miles to witness.

The Midway this year will be galore with fun, fast and furious to entertain the masses.

People will see a $2,000.00 vaudeville show at the grand stand, while down town will be the mammoth Baby Show, art exhibit and a grand feature vaudeville entertainment, with a change of program every night at City Hall. Watch this paper for our ad, and further notices.

Boy Drowned.

The three-year-old son of John Gregg, residing about a mile from the village on the North Buckfield road, was drowned Thursday afternoon in the west branch of the Twenty Mile river which flows through the intervals in the rear of the house. Mr. Gregg was working in the field across the stream, and it is thought that the little fellow may have been seeking his father. His mother, missing him and not finding him at a nearby neighbor, sought him in the fields and found his body in the stream. Dr. Marston of West Sumner, who happened to be near at hand, was immediately summoned, but it was too late for resuscitation.

Are You Going to the World's Fair?

If so, you should take along a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. The hot weather, fatigue and change of drinking water and diet are almost certain to produce diarrhoea, and when you have this remedy at hand you can check it at once. If you wish to buy it while there you can get it at any drug store in St. Louis, and at the Inside Inn Drug Store. For sale by Noyes Drug Store, Shurtleff's, South and West Paris.

Oxford's Good Luck.

Oxford 8, Radcliffe 7.

In one of the most interesting ball games played on the Fair grounds, this year, the Oxford team defeated the Radcliffes to the time of 8 to 7.

The home team met after Adams in the first three innings, making 7 hits, one of them a double, and getting 7 men across the rubber. Bearce came in from first and caught the remainder of the game for Oxford and we never scored again.

The Oxford made one run in the first on a free pass to first, a sacrifice and a single, and one in the third on a hit, a stolen base and an error. In the next four innings neither side scored. In the eighth a batting streak gave Oxford four scores, leaving them one score to tie. In the ninth, Lavis the first man up for Oxford, hit a slow grounder to the infield, which Sparks made no effort to handle and Davis was safe on first. It should have been an easy out, and would have left the score tied at the end of the ninth. Wilson the next up hit a grounder straight over second base, Jordan was there ahead of the ball, but allowed it to go through him and lost a simple chance for a double play which would have given us the game. The home team went out in order in the eighth and ninth on flies.

The Radcliffes played two new men; Jordan at second base and Libby at right field. Jordan's playing was decidedly off color and he struck out three times. Bonney played a star game for Radcliffe and Davis excelled for the visitors. Sam Eaton from Oxford, who usually umpires a good game, was a little off and gave the home team the short end of most of the close decisions.

A slight accident to Bearce, in the sixth, delayed the game a few minutes. Following is the score:

Why They Read

G. M. Morse of Danversport, Mass., says: "My wife was a Northwest Norway girl and was married 17 years ago in that part of the town and often we spend many pleasant hours thinking of the people that are left behind us among the pleasant hillsides. My wife has just returned from a four weeks' vacation at her father's, T. L. Newcomb's, and reports having a good time as one can have in your pleasant town. Don't forget to put in the news, if any from that part of the town, for it will be missed by those that read your very interesting paper, that is read by several from Norway after we have read it."

WHAT ADVERTISING DID.

The annual meeting of the National Biscuit company, held in Jersey City, was of considerable interest. The report of Mr. A. W. Green, chairman of the board of directors, showed a phenomenal growth in the business of the company. This he explained as follows:

Enormous Increase in Sales of National Biscuit Company.

"When the company started, our goods were sold almost entirely in bulk, and the package business was in its infancy. We determined that the true way to sell certain of our goods was to sell them in small, airtight, moisture proof packages. The first result of this determination was the Unesoda biscuit, a five cent package protected by United States patent. The idea was novel, and we soon found that we had struck the taste of the people. The introduction of the Unesoda biscuit was followed by many other packages put up in the same manner and sealed with the in-er-seal trademark design.

Written for the Advertiser. Wealth and Avarice Rule the Land.

Wherefore all this commotion Across the briny deep, Where Pops are made to order The Vatican to keep? The Kaiser and King Edward Are not above the man, They each would steal a nation Except for Uncle Sam. The Kaiser is making figures, And lining up to fight To robble up old China. Regardless of the right, And Sam, he wants a corner, He wants an open door, When he comes to Chinamen. He does want some more.

And now our Uncle Sammy With love and holy zeal, About to chide the Kaiser, For Kaiser's sorry deal, Great Scott and Holy Moses! Just look the country o'er; The murder, lust, and lynchings, And shedding human gore. Selfrighteous Uncle Sammy, Just mind your p's and q's, And if you're going to nupture Pray liquidate your dues.

What care we for the Pretense? What care we for the Pope? Behold the Inquisition! The scourge of every hope. They've only changed the process, Instead of human gore. They squeeze the last red copper, And then they cry for more. The priest to lend its favor And laud these men of function, To each outvie the other And have with holy unction. Great men are seeking power, Throughout the church and State; And any fed for plunder Is surely up to date.

They take our men in transit, The treasury despoil, Postal funds are now in vogue To grind the men who toil. This thus from Dan to 'Sheba, The people scarce oppress, They grovel on in serfdom, Bewailing oft their woes. Publicity, the watch-word, The cry throughout the land; But we've a different version; Faithful, be-danged! Buckfield, Me. GILBERT TILFON.

The Investigator and The Fly Paper.

When it is winter the Investigator longs for the good old summer time; when it is mosquito time then he longs for the days when the little buzzers are quiet; when those days come then are the days of the fly, the common house fly, one of the most common nuisances, and annoying.

The scientific name of the fly the Investigator believes is the cursedwell tormentum, at least he was told so by an eminent authority, who gave several descriptions of the insect the exact terms of which he has forgotten and would be too polite to repeat.

The Investigator is peculiarly the victim of flies. They walk all over his clothing, they hold conventions on exposed positions of his face and neck; on the broad expanse of the top of his head and they gather on his elbow, just out of reach and when he is holding some valuable article then they sit and tickle and flourish about and stick and resist all efforts to dislodge them and the Investigator rages and fumes and fuses and well might explode because of the dynamic power of his wrath.

Some days the flies are almost unbearable. Such a day came not long ago and the Investigator was busy. He was writing and it was hard work. The printers were demanding "copy," and the Investigator was searching for some important and interesting fact for the illumination and edification of his friends. It was warm. The little beady drops of perspiration began to gather, then grew into a small stream. A sudden tickling at the back of his neck and he knew that the enemy had found him. A wriggle of the head and a swipe of the hand dislodged the insect for a moment but the pest went into the air and sent a wireless telegram, summoning seven other demons like unto himself, who came singing, Shall We Gather at the River.

They overran the Investigator's writing pad; they held a convention on the edge of his ink well; they had a political meeting at the mouth of his mucilage bottle and like their human prototypes were out for all that was in it. One of them lighted on the Investigator's ear just as he was penning one of those throbbing, burning thoughts. The Investigator has several of those throbbing, burning thoughts, in fact, so many that wherever he is insurance rates rise at least 1 per cent. It was one of those burning thoughts and was a burning word that came out a scorch. Something had to be done and the Investigator, done it. He went and bought something to catch the flies. It was the sticky kind of paper, that kind which come in double sheets butter side inside, and all covered on the outside with directions, testimonials and remarks on the desirability of catching flies, and preventing the spread of diseases, nervous disorders and improper language. Also there was a picture representing the paper in use, the paper lying flat dozens of flies caught by the feet, the wings or head, and hundreds of others coming in swarms and steady wing to join them in deep oblivion.

Well, the Investigator got the paper. Grasping firmly each of the two sheets, he exerted a strong, steady pull on them. For a short time the gum yielded to the pull, then a small section parted company with the rest and with a clean and joyful flip-flop transferred its affections to the back of the Investigator's hand. How it stuck! The Investigator's hands are heavily bearded and to each several silky hair the paper clung like a politician to a voter just before election. It took several minutes to remove the paper and some more to clean his hands.

The paper was deposited in a fly haunt place and then suddenly disappeared. It was found four hours later clinging with desperate tenacity to the edge of his sack coat. The final separation of the remainder of the one sheet from the other was accomplished without incident other than the desperate endeavor to cling to his hands.

The separation being effected one section was placed on the top of the desk overhang, while the other was put upon the writing pad where the flies' field of sports were going on. In just about three seconds the paper began to accumulate—not flies but such substances as a rubber stamp; a pair of scissors, a pen holder and three pencils, mullage bottle and ink pad, and was turning up a hungry eye and calling for more! more!

A writ of ejectment was served on these articles, and after they had been all removed outside of magnetic distance of the paper, the Investigator decided to change its location. This time in a few moments its accumulation was three sheets of paper, two newspaper clippings, pins and rubber bands with-number. After these articles had been safely removed and the paper ready for business again, the Investigator decided to remove it to a place where less substantial articles and more flies could be gathered. So it was placed in the window, where it would intercept perhaps some of the great cloud which wended its way inward.

But the other piece, a little higher in location and somewhat out of reach, had accumulated practically nothing, not even flies. A short time the Investigator was at a mauling stage, cursing came, interview the paper, walked on it, fed on it, danced on it and left at their own convenience.

This paper the Investigator moved to an easy chair where oftentimes he sits while taking from one of his beautiful books fuel for those burning thoughts. About two minutes later one of the Investigator's particular friends came in for a social chat. The Investigator could hardly spare the time and did not welcome him very cordially, but this was made up by the hearty welcome of the big easy chair—and the paper. Now the Investigator has an easy chair for life. The paper was separated from its resting place and put back in the chair. Both sections remained dormant for some time, until the Investigator leaning from the window to speak to a friend calmly but indignantly lay both hands upon the paper's stickiness.

It was then the Investigator got mad. He was simply angry before. He rudely detached that fly paper and hurled it from the window. The other piece promptly followed scarcely reaching the ground before a small dog came to it. It transferred its claws, wearing an idiotic grin and its rustle playing a sweet refrain, "Farewell, but not forever." But it never came back.

Agricultural Education.

A Return to the Soil. The little red brick schoolhouse of the earlier days of the settlement of the Mississippi Valley States was the principal factor in the elevation of our great middle class which made of the American nation a people of intelligent thinkers, ready and able in time of crisis to decide right and to do. Higher education has followed and new systems and methods have supplanted the "Hoosier Schoolmaster" and the birch rod, identified with the little red schoolhouse.

Education of the country has undoubtedly risen many degrees, but with this advance have come problems more perplexing than those which troubled the pedagogues of our fathers. The trend of the country raised boy is all too irresistibly toward the city, where the young people of the cities to fill his place in the country. The problem is one for the most serious consideration of our best statesmen, this constant and centrifugal movement which is overproving our centers of industry, where men far from day wages, and which is steadily drawing from our rural communities where men own the land they live upon and get their sustenance from the soil.

To Stem the Drift. Yet there are quiet forces at work, year by year, being better organized and of broader power, whose tendency is to overcome this hurtful condition and induce a migration back to the land and away from the overcrowded centers. Industrial and agricultural education are playing an important part in this movement, and the school is doing something of the soil and plants, the real wonders of nature working around us at every hand, are no longer looked upon as fads. An interesting move in this direction was made the other day in the organization of the American League for Industrial Education, in Chicago, with such national characters for officers and sponsors as N. O. Nelson of St. Louis, who has founded the village and school of Le Claire, adjacent to his factories at Edwardsville, Illinois; Thomas Kane, president of the Wisconsin Assembly, which is establishing an institution for the teaching of agriculture in Indianapolis; J. H. Krauskopf, founder and president of the now noted national farm school at Doylestown, Pennsylvania; John H. Patterson, president of the National Cash Register Co., whose school at Dayton, Ohio, have awakened a widespread interest; Gen. R. S. Tutthill, through whose efforts the St. Charles Home for Boys at Chicago was founded; O. J. Kern, superintendent of schools for Winnebago County, Illinois, who has done a great work in the consolidation of country schools, and perfected plans for engraving on them methods for the practical teaching of improved agriculture in experimental gardens; E. B. Butler, president of the board of trustees of the Illinois Manual Training School Farm; and Milton George, the founder of the Chicago Hull House Social Settlement, and others of note in this movement.

Teach the Dignity of Work. The League is working for an industrial public school system which will include the teaching of domestic science and both agricultural and manual training in all the public schools, so that children shall be taught to work with their hands and farm as they are taught in the public schools of France and Denmark. It should be a school garden, where every child should be taught to be a lover of nature and of the country and trained toward the land as a source of honorable livelihood, rather than away from it.

Such a system of education would undoubtedly be a movement toward the city. The farm boy who receives a fair school or high school education naturally turns toward the place where he can best apply it. His training has not been such as would help him to farm better, or make of farming an interesting science. And so he goes to the city, where on the other hand, the city boy, as he grows up and marries, would like to have a home of his own on the land, but he knows the trade he has learned. He knows nothing of farming and he would not know what to do on a piece of land if he had it. It has been often said that it is useless to put the poor of the great cities out in the country because they will not stay there. They cannot be expected to, for to them it is a strange and barren story. The experience of the Salvation Army, however, found in its many irrigated colonies, shows that men will go out from the cities and live on the land and make good citizens, where they are taught what to do with the land after they get on it.

The irrigated farms of the West show the great capacity of land when well and intensively farmed, and that men can live in plenty and comfort on five acres and even on a single acre. Suppose that the 75,000 recently discharged employees of the Pennsylvania Railroad each had a highly cultivated acre of rich land to which he could turn his attention, instead of being a drag on the community and country, instead of having stopped producing and consuming, they would still be producers and would still be able to at least get a living from the soil. Does not this instance of the unemployment of 75,000 men, who might, if they owned each an acre, be getting a living from the soil, supply food for thought to the man who is pondering over economic problems?

Any worn out range burns at least three cents more in fuel every day than a new Glenwood. That's putting it small. 3 times 365 is $10.95. You see it doesn't take long to waste the cost of a new Glenwood and the expense isn't all, the chances are the old range is the "worry kind."

HARRISON.

Some miscreant entered the premises of Elbridge Sanborn in South Harrison, a few nights since, and stole some half dozen hens and a large flock of good sized chickens. The thief had the kindness to kill a part of the fowls on the spot and leave the heads behind for the owner. It is said that there are strong suspicions of a young man who has been accused of such things in the past, and that the theft is likely to be fixed on him.

Farmers are complaining that the crop of potatoes promises to be a very light one. Harrison Lodge of Odd Fellows contemplate making quite extensive additions to their hall buildings at the village for their own convenience and to give additional room to those who rent the lower part. The additions will make some slight changes in the old part, but the chief advantage to the lodge will be a large room on the upper floor which will be finished for a banquet hall. There will be a large room on the first floor for the use of the lodge. It is expected that the work will be commenced in a short time, and finished before winter.

Lakeside Grange held its regular meeting on the 27th with an attendance of about 40. Two applications for membership were received. An interesting discussion followed, in which the speakers took part. It was voted that the Grange hold a Field Day on Howard Farm in Waterford, on Saturday, Sept. 3. BUCKFIELD.

A Place for Everyone.

Went to South Paris, Monday. Took electric for Norway, being informed they tarried fifteen minutes at that port. Thought that amount of time would give a sufficient amount of material to write up the town. We return in two minutes. Rather short, so I started down street. Met the ADVERTISER editor. Guess he did not know me. His was the only familiar face. Temperature rather low. Boarded the car. Noticed a well kept cemetery where many have taken homes. Returned to South Paris. Met two familiar faces there. Used to meet acquaintances many and often, but they have passed away and new faces and sometimes faces occupy. Visited the well kept cemetery there. It reminded me of a description of a cemetery by a man many years ago, of a well kept cemetery for those days. He said it was "a very flourishing burial ground." The uneven formation of the land, being bordered by the river, lends picturesque-ness to the view. Well, we'll soon be there. We have a place to occupy. People do that now more than formerly, when the great dread occupied men's minds in early days, the last resting place of friends, with whom we shall soon become joint occupants. "Tis nature to live, 'tis nature to die."

Rev. Mr. Turner of Rumford Falls was in town, Monday.

K. G. Wood of New Jersey has recently been in town.

Seward Mitchell of Lynn, a former Buckfield boy, is visiting old acquaintances. His sister preceded him.

Walter Ellingwood has leased the A. A. Farrar place where Stanley Benson now resides. Stanley has leased F. A. Taylor's place, the last house on High street.

Isaac Layman and wife of Minneapolis, coming to Boston on the G. A. R. excursion, extended their visit to this place, last week, to visit an uncle, Wm. Irish, and an aunt, Mrs. Wm. Robinson. They were neighbors of ours in Minneapolis thirty-nine years ago. They were anxious to get home after hearing of a disastrous cyclone in their vicinity.

Last Saturday Hon. John P. Swasey and Hon. John D. Long spoke on political lines, past and present, to a small audience at Nesinot hall, Monday.

Col. Kimball of Norway and candidate Davis of Waterville spoke at the same place on Democratic lines to a slightly larger audience. Since I was not present I cannot particularize. As I never have heard Mr. Davis, I would like to have attended, but being absent I lost hence I am in about the fix that a man I once knew, who was not safe to gamble on politically. On being interviewed he would reply, "I want to hear the arguments." Since I have not heard the arguments I am at a loss to know how to vote.
